

""Twitter handle (and profile name): albertolivas (Alberto Olivas)

Twitter description: Trainer/educator in the areas of civic education, public engagement, and voter outreach.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "Alberto Olivas joined ASU from Maricopa Community Colleges where he was director of the Center for Civic Participation. At ASU, he is the founding executive director of the newly formed Ed Pastor Center for Politics and Public Service which encourages political engagement among ASU students and the broader community. The Center has a particular focus on communities that are the least represented in politics, a natural fit for the diverse population at ASU. Previously, Olivas served as Director of the Arizona Governor's Office of Equal Opportunity, was appointed to the board of directors of the Arizona Commission of Indian Affairs, and was the state's first Voter Outreach Director in the Office of Arizona Secretary of State Betsey Bayless."

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: Pastor Center for Politics and Public Service | Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions

Headings: Pastor Center for Politics and Public Service; Building on a legacy of service to inspire future leaders; Congressman Ed Pastor; Support

Paragraphs: ; The Pastor Center honors Congressman Ed Pastor and his legacy of service in Arizona and the nation-and serves as an inspiration for the future generation of leaders. Located in the ASU Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions, the Center serves as a dynamic, student-centric hub of activity that promotes, publicizes, and encourages political engagement and public service among ASU students and the broader community. It embodies ASU's commitment to being an active agent of change, addressing society's problems. The Center serves on a national stage as one of twenty-five university-based public service institutes participating in Harvard University's National Campaign for Political and Civic Engagement, launched by the Kennedy School's Institute of Politics.; For more than four decades, Congressman Ed Pastor was a guiding star in the field of public service for Arizonans. Growing up in Claypool, Arizona, Pastor was the first in his family to graduate from college, and he used that education to change his own life and better the community. As a teacher, director of a nonprofit organization and ultimately the first Mexican-American congressman to represent the state of Arizona, Pastor left an indelible mark on both the local community and the national political landscape.; Full BioLearn more about Ed Pastor's legacy; Support the Pastor Center; Contact Watts College; Give now

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: Home | Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions

Headings: Building more vibrant, healthy, equitable & sustainable communities; Six reasons to apply to ASU's Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions; Watts College schools; Watts College features some of the best schools in the nation

Paragraphs: Watts College is the largest, most comprehensive public service college in the nation.; Ahead of Pennsylvania State and University at Albany - SUNY; Tied with Princeton; Ranked in the top 10% of graduate programs in social work; Contact Watts College; Give now

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the information provided, it can be inferred that this organization is affiliated with Arizona State University (ASU). This can be deduced from the presence of ASU-related URLs and references to ASU colleges, programs, and departments. The organization seems to be focused on public service and community engagement, as evidenced by the mention of the Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions, the Pastor Center for Politics and Public Service, and the School of Public Affairs. Additionally, the organization has a presence on various social media platforms, indicating its engagement with the public. However, without further context or information, it is difficult to determine the specific nature and scope of this organization's activities."""