

""Twitter handle (and profile name): weavethepl (Weave: the Social Fabric Project)

Twitter description: Working with groups, individuals, and communities to repair the national social fabric. Part of @AspenInstitute | Currently #WeavingCommunity with #WeaverAwards

Description of the organization from a third party source: "The Weaver movement is repairing our country's social fabric, which is badly frayed by distrust, division and exclusion. People are quietly working across America to end loneliness and isolation and weave inclusive communities. Join us in shifting our culture from hyper-individualism that is all about personal success, to relationalism that puts relationships at the center of our lives"

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: Home - Weave: The Social Fabric Project at The Aspen Institute

Headings: Weave: The Social Fabric Project; A nation of weavers; We can create a more caring America; Weave supports the trust builders; The Weave Newsletter; The Weave Community; The Weave Learning Center; The Weaver Network; Weaver Awards; The Weave Speakers Bureau

Paragraphs: Weave: The Social Fabric Project tackles the problem of broken social trust that has left Americans divided, lonely, and in social gridlock. Weave connects, supports, and invests in local leaders stepping up to weave a new, inclusive social fabric where they live. The project was founded by New York Times columnist and author David Brooks at the Aspen Institute.; The US is living through a crisis of connection. Suicide rates have risen dramatically, especially among youth. The opioid epidemic has devastated communities. 58% of Americans say they are lonely. Violence, hatred, and political gridlock have become normal. Yet there is a way out.; In communities throughout the country, in ways big and small, people are showing up for each other and building connection and trust. You probably know some of them. They are the people neighbors count on. They value everyone no matter our differences, make us feel we belong, and act to bring people together to address shared needs. We call them weavers. You may be one of them.; Weavers are people who create deep relationships with others where they live or work, while tackling shared needs and building social trust.; ; Weave connects and invests in the people weaving our communities together. We work to inspire all Americans to weave. And we make it easy to take the first steps into weaving.; Weave's newsletter is a weekly dose of weaver stories, resources to fuel weaving, and reflections from many perspectives on what it means to invest in relationships and weave a strong, inclusive social fabric from the ground up.; Weave Community is an online home where weavers gather for peer support, learning, and collaboration. They share resources, discuss challenges, offer mentorship, and celebrate successes.; Weave Learning Center is a place to gain or strengthen your community-building skills at your own pace or with other weavers. The offerings range from community organizing to public speaking to facilitating groups.; The Weaver Network of volunteer opportunities is a search engine to find and join organizations that are weaving near where you live.; The Weaver Awards unleash the power of philanthropy for neighborhoods. The Awards are a community-led model that enable foundations and corporations to find and invest through microgrants directly in the people weaving trust locally.; Weave Speakers Bureau trains and places weavers on stages large and small across the US to inspire others and create a nation of weavers.; Copyright (C) 2024. Aspen Institute's Weave: The Social Fabric Project. All rights reserved.

reserved.

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: About Us - Weave: The Social Fabric Project

Headings: Weave: The Social Fabric Project; About Us; Weave in Action; The Weave Team; Community Advisors; Weave's Home is the Aspen Institute; Funders and Partners; Sign up for the Weave newsletter to follow the Weave Project, get invitations to events, and hear about resources to support you in weaving your community.

Paragraphs: In 2018, New York Times columnist David Brooks founded Weave: The Social Fabric Project at the Aspen Institute to address the crisis of broken social trust that has left Americans divided along many lines, isolated and unable to address our common needs. The project aims to turn Americans into a nation of weavers, spreading connection and belonging.; The project began with a listening tour, where Brooks and the Weave team traveled to towns and cities across the country to understand how people in different communities were working to move from a culture of isolation and individualism to one of relationalism. Those conversations sparked Weave's first product, The Relationalist Manifesto.; In 2019, Weave organized the first national #WeaveThePeople gathering in Washington, DC. Weavers from all over the country came together to meet each other and discuss how and what the Weave project needed to move to create a nation of weavers.; Based on the #WeaveThePeople event and subsequent conversations with weavers, the Weave project now combines in-person gatherings with online tools and spaces with the goal of reaching 10 million weavers over the next decade.; Today, the Weave project supports weavers in three ways:; 1) Connect weavers through events, training, and an online community.; 2) Lift up the critical role of weavers as trusted social leaders, even when they don't have titles or many resources, by providing them with funding, speaking opportunities, and sharing their stories.; 3) Inspire more people to live a weaving way of life that values relationships as highly as their own achievements.; As the project scope evolved, David Brooks's role at Weave has shifted. He currently serves as Chair. The Executive Director is Frederick J. Riley. You can see a conversation between them at Aspen Ideas Festival 2023 in the video below.; Today, Weave connects, lifts, and inspires weavers through several programs and products. Whether you are new to weaving or already have an organization bringing people together in your neighborhood, you will find something valuable to you.; The true faces of Weave are the weavers. They are in every community, quietly creating connection, inspiring hope and leading with love. You can find their stories here. Our team supports weavers and illuminates their way of life to inspire others to join them.; Chair; Director; Senior Manager of Engagement; Communications Manager; Community Assistant; Senior Operations Associate; Executive Director; Communications Director; Weave's community advisors serve a two-year term providing guidance on Weave's strategy, programs and communications. They come from diverse backgrounds and communities, and bring both professional skills and rich experience. They share a way of living that inspires trust in their neighbors, welcomes people across differences, and weaves their communities together through discussion and action.; Los Angeles, CA; Danbury, CT; Wilkesboro, NC; Minneapolis, MN; Pittsburgh, PA; Norwood, OH; Washington, DC; Baltimore, MD; San Francisco, CA; Compton, CA; Chicago, IL; Dallas, TX; The Aspen Institute is a global nonprofit organization committed to realizing a free, just, and equitable society. Founded in 1949, the Institute drives change through dialogue, leadership, and action to help solve the most important challenges facing the United States and the world. Headquartered in Washington, DC, the Institute has a campus in Aspen, Colorado, and an international network of partners. Weave: The Social Fabric Project reports to the president of Aspen.; Culture change requires many to show courage and declare that there is a better way for us to live. Weave's work is supported by individuals and organizations who believe that changing our culture of hyper-individualism is key to healing the disconnection, isolation and despair in American society and building social trust. Countless people and organizations already work locally to support neighbors who are struggling and to build healthy, connected and inclusive communities. All are partners in this work. Weave is currently receiving funding from the following people and organizations.; ; Jacklyn G. and Miguel A. Bezos; David Rubenstein; M&T Bank; ; ; ; ; ; Walton Family Foundation; Walmart Foundation; ; ; ; ; ; ; ; ; Copyright (C) 2024. Aspen Institute's Weave: The Social Fabric Project. All rights_x000D_

reserved.

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided information, it can be inferred that this organization, Weavers, is likely dedicated to fostering connections and supporting individuals in various ways. The presence of links to their website, network, awards, about section, stories, and opportunities to join suggests that they aim to engage with a community of people. The inclusion of links to speakers, contact information, and a community page indicates that they value communication and interaction with their members. Additionally, the links to learning resources and social media platforms hint at their commitment to education, sharing knowledge, and building a sense of community. While the specific nature of their work cannot be determined from the provided information, it is evident that Weavers seeks to connect, inform, and empower individuals through various initiatives and platforms."""