

""Twitter handle (and profile name): GPHarvard (The Good Project)

Twitter description: Encouraging excellence, ethics, and engagement.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "The Good Project is one of the research initiatives housed at the Harvard Graduate School of Education's Project Zero. Project Zero is an educational research group at the Harvard Graduate School of Education composed of multiple, independently-sponsored research projects. Since 1967, Project Zero has examined the development of learning processes in children, adults, and organizations. Today, Project Zero's work includes investigations into the nature of intelligence, understanding, thinking, creativity, ethics, and other essential aspects of human learning. Our mission is to understand and enhance high-level thinking and learning across disciplines and cultures and in a range of contexts, including schools, businesses, museums, and digital environments. The Good Project promotes excellence, engagement, and ethics in education, preparing people to become good workers and good citizens who contribute to the overall well-being of society. Through our research-based concepts, frameworks, and resources, we seek to help students reflect upon the ethical dilemmas that arise in everyday life and give them the tools to make thoughtful decisions."

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: The Good Project

Headings: ; Encouraging ethical, excellent, and engaging work.; Search our blog here;; In Memory of Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi; Discover the past, present, and future of The Good Project. Click the button Below to watch a series of short videos

Paragraphs: Doing Good; Starts With You; Explore Our Resource Center; Founded by psychologists William Damon, Howard Gardner, and the late Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi in 1996, The Good Project has two decades of experience carrying out qualitative research and developing practical materials with an emphasis on topics including the meaning of good work, effective collaboration, digital citizenship, and civic participation.; Presently, through research-based concepts, frameworks, and resources, The Good Project strives to equip individuals to reflect upon the ethical dilemmas that arise in everyday life by providing them with the tools to make thoughtful decisions.; The Good Project pays tribute to one of its founders-the late Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi (September 29, 1934-October 20 2021). A giant of the scholarly world-with a unique blend of conceptual, qualitative, and quantitative gifts-a wise man, a cherished friend.; 13 Appian Way, Longfellow Hall 234 | Cambridge, MA 02138 | Phone: 617-496-4652; Click here for the Digital Accessibility Policy; Powered by Squarespace; (C)2022 President and Fellows of Harvard College and Project Zero This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License (CC BY-NC-ND). This license allows users to share this work with others, but it cannot be used commercially.

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: About Us - The Good Project

Headings: ; Learn more about The Good Project's history and the themes we explore by watching the video series below.

Paragraphs: About Us; The Good Project is one of the research initiatives housed at the Harvard Graduate School of Education's Project Zero. Project Zero is an educational research group composed of multiple, independently-sponsored research projects. Since 1967, Project Zero has examined the development of learning processes in children, adults, and organizations. Today, Project Zero's work includes investigations into the nature of intelligence, understanding, thinking, creativity, ethics, and other essential aspects of human learning. Our mission is to understand and enhance high-level thinking and learning across disciplines and cultures and in a range of contexts, including schools, businesses, museums, and digital environments.; The Good Project promotes excellence, engagement, and ethics in education, preparing people to become good workers and good citizens who contribute to the overall well-being of society. Through our research-based concepts, frameworks, and resources, we seek to help students reflect upon the ethical dilemmas that arise in everyday life and give them the tools to make thoughtful decisions.; Through its variety of components, The Good Project investigates realms such as work, civic participation, organizational collaboration, conceptions of quality, and secondary and higher education. The Good Project has designed a range of public materials, found in our resources section. The project welcomes inquiries and is open to possible collaborations.; ; 13 Appian Way, Longfellow Hall 234 | Cambridge, MA 02138 | Phone: 617-496-4652; Click here for the Digital Accessibility Policy; Powered by Squarespace®; (C)2022 President and Fellows of Harvard College and Project Zero This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License (CC BY-NC-ND). This license allows users to share this work with others, but it cannot be used commercially.

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: Our History - The Good Project

Headings: ; 1996-2000; 2001-2005; 2006-2010; 2011-2015; 2016-2020

Paragraphs: Timeline of The Good Project; After a year together at the Stanford Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, psychologists Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, William Damon, and Howard Gardner co-found "The Humane Creativity Project," the forerunner of The Good Project.; The Humane Creativity Project changes its name to the Good Work Project and expands to involve 50 researchers on five different campuses. The teams conduct interviews with workers from 9 domains: journalism, genetics, theater, business, K-

12 education, higher education, law, medicine, and philanthropy. Individuals range in age and professional stage.; Hans Henrik Knoop of the Royal Danish School of Educational Studies joins the Good Work Project and completes pilot studies in Latvia, our first international partner.; Our first book-length publication, Good Work: When Excellence and Ethics Meet, is published in September 2001. To date, it has been translated into ten languages.; We first posit our theory of "Good Work" that is composed of three elements: excellence, ethics, and engagement.; The Good Work Toolkit is developed to encourage young people to reflect on issues of "Good Work." Researchers pilot the curriculum with individual teachers and ultimately deploy the curriculum in a variety of different school environments.; Howard Gardner first teaches his class "Good Work in Education: When Excellence, Engagement, and Ethics Meet" at the Harvard Graduate School of Education.; The Traveling Curriculum in Journalism, a series of training workshops for mid-career journalists, is developed by William Damon and colleagues in collaboration with the Committee of Concerned Journalists.; Two Good Work Project conferences are held in Copenhagen at the Royal Danish School of Educational Studies, in participation with William Damon, Howard Gardner, Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, and Jeanne Nakamura.; The Good Work Project expands at Harvard and changes its name to The Good Project. Several initiatives are spawned that build upon theories of "Good Work," including:; The Good Collaboration Project, a study of effective collaborative endeavors.; The Good Play Project, a study of youth and digital ethics.; The Developing Minds and Digital Media Project, a study of how young people use new digital media and the cognitive effects of such media.; The Good Participation Project, a study of how youth participate in political and civic life.; The Trust & Trustworthiness Project, a study of young people's trust conceptions.; The Quality Project, a study of how people around the world conceptualize "quality."; Our website is first launched, giving our project a digital footprint.; Meanwhile, William Damon continues his work at Stanford University on the development of a sense of purpose, while Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and Jeanne Nakamura of the Claremont Graduate University establish the Quality of Life Research Center.; "Reflecting on Your Life" is launched, a collaboration between the The Good Project, Harvard Freshman Dean's Office, and HGSE Professor Richard Light. These reflective sessions, offered to first-year Harvard students, touch on questions of purpose, values, and responsibilities, and eventually the program spreads to several other institutions of higher education.; The Good Project engages in several meaningful collaborations, including:; Project New Media Literacies, resulting in the creation of a digital media ethics curriculum.; The Global Leadership and Education Foundation, resulting in a year-long Good Work certification program and professional development for teachers in India.; Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania, resulting in a campus-wide Good Work Initiative.; Common Sense Media, resulting in a K-12 digital citizenship curriculum.; The Professional Honor Foundation in the Netherlands, resulting in numerous sessions and publications focused on Dutch professional identity and policy.; The Good Project's conference is held in March 2013 at the Noble and Greenough School in Dedham, MA. Speakers include Danielle Allen, Ron Berger, William Damon, Eric Liu, John Palfrey, Esa Saarinen, Kiran Sethi, Rick Weissbourd, and Damian Woetzel. (At Stanford University, a similar conference was held in 2012, with attendees including Anne Colby, Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, Eric Liu, Jeanne Nakamura, and Henry Timms.); The Good Collaboration Toolkit is launched as a free, online resource.; Howard Gardner's blog "The Professional Ethicist" is launched, focusing on ethical issues in the professions.; Our three co-founders: Gardner, Damon, and Csikszentmihalyi; The Good Project team continues to develop research endeavors informed by the original investigation of "Good Work," including;; Higher Education in the 21st Century, a study of how different stakeholders view the purposes of traditional college education in the United States.; Investigating Impacts of Educational Experiences, a study evaluating the effects of educational programs on students at the United World Colleges and eleven other mission-oriented schools.; Materials intended to facilitate reflection about the nature of "good work" continue to be developed, including an online module with two animated dilemmas and a series of new lesson plans for educators.; To be continued!; 13 Appian Way, Longfellow Hall 234 | Cambridge, MA 02138 | Phone: 617-496-4652; Click here for the Digital Accessibility Policy; Powered by Squarespace; (C)2022 President and Fellows of Harvard College and Project Zero This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License (CC BY-NC-ND). This license allows users to share this work with others, but it cannot be used commercially.

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided information, it appears that this organization is heavily involved in educational resources and materials. The presence of sections such as "lesson plans," "professional development," "activities database," and "teacher resources" suggests that the organization is focused on providing support and guidance to educators. Additionally, the inclusion of a "good blog" section with articles on topics like "core concepts blog excellence" and "ethics and American colleges" indicates that the organization values intellectual discourse and engagement with current educational issues. The mention of "funders" and "connections" suggests that the organization may rely on external support and collaborations to carry out its activities. Overall, the available information points towards an organization dedicated to promoting educational excellence and providing resources to educators and students.""