

""Twitter handle (and profile name): mwhuggins (Mike Huggins)

Twitter description: Former city manager using 30 yrs management/planning experience to build the civic problem solving skills of everyday people to do extraordinary public work

Description of the organization from a third party source: "Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM, is a former city manager with over 30 years leadership experience in urban planning and city management. He is a civic engagement service provider for ICMA's Center for Management Strategies and teaches an undergraduate honors class on "Community Leadership: Moving From Talk to Action." He holds masters degrees in public administration and urban planning from the University of Kansas."

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM

Headings: Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM; Our Public Life; The Rise of American Democracy; How Collective Bargaining Strengthens Local Public Services; Clear Vision Empowerment Summit; Eau Claire Grade Level Reading Campaign; Top 10 Tips for Political Apologies; Living the Good Life Means Having a Public Life; 10 Challenges for Local Democracy; Civility and Kindergarten; Eau Claire City Council Adopts ABA Resolution on Civil Public Discourse; Posts navigation Paragraphs: In 1994, Frances Lappe Moore and Paul Martin Du Bois released The Quickening of America: Rebuilding Our Nation, Remaking Our Lives. They observed: The biggest problem facing American is not those issues that bombard us daily, from homelessness and failing schools to environmental devastation and the federal deficit. Underlying each is a deeper crisis. Some ...; I just finished re-reading Sean Wilentz's The Rise of American Democracy: Jefferson to Lincoln, which is a thoroughly enjoyable read and an excellent reminder that democracy is not destiny and should never be taken for granted. Wilentz writes: "Democracy appears when some large numbers of previously excluded, ordinary persons-what the eighteenth century called "the mob"-secure ...; Several months ago the US Supreme Court ruled in Harris v. Quinn that eight Illinois home-care aides who provided home care to Medicare recipients "...should be classified as partial public employees and should not be treated the same way as public schoolteachers or police officers who work directly for the government." (Read the NY Times ...; The Clear Vision Eau Claire engagement initiative was launched in 2007 with a series of community stakeholder meetings facilitated by the National Civic League as part of a citizen led community visioning process. A diverse group of community members met at Peace Lutheran Church in Eau Claire from October 2007 through May 2008 and produced ...; Henry Giroux observed in a recent essay that, "Democracies need informed citizens to make them work and they can only survive amid a formative culture that produces individuals willing to think critically, imagine otherwise and act responsibly." An educated and informed citizenry begins with assuring that all children in our local communities are reading proficiently ...; Emily Yoffe, who writes the "Dear Prudence" column for Slate.com, recently posted advice for Rush Limbaugh on how not to apologize. While I'm not convinced the nation's #1 Dittohead is likely to heed the advice in the future, I think there are some very valuable tips for the rest of us-especially political leaders and officials ...; Last week I listened to a presentation from the Chippewa Valley Museum (CVM) on the results of our community's first comprehensive cultural assessment. "The Good Life: A Cultural Direction for Eau Claire County" - aka The Good Life Plan - is a strikingly done strategic vision for integrating arts and culture more deeply into the ...; Local communities are struggling with an historic rupture in democratic governance that is altering the traditional roles and responsibilities of citizens, government, and business in how we make public decisions and govern ourselves. This struggle is being shaped by four long-term trends. Four Long-Term Trends Much of the policy shift at local and state government ...; I've been thinking about a conference call I had this week with the American Bar Association Civility Task Force about encouraging more civil public discourse by all government officials, politicians, media, and advocacy groups. At one point, our conversation turned to what might be effective tools or practices of civility to promote, and we concluded that we needed to research existing civility tools and dispute resolution training programs to see what might be most useful.; Perhaps sometimes in the world of government, politics, and public policy we just make things too complicated. Perhaps sometimes we just need to remember what most of us learned in kindergarten...; On Tuesday, the Eau Claire City Council adopted a resolution urging all government officials, politicians, political parties, media, and advocacy groups to work harder for civil public discourse. The Eau Claire City Council resolution notes that dialogue, respectful communication, and informed public decision-making are central to civil public discourse, which is at the heart of ...; Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM, is a former Eau Claire City Manager and Planning Director with 40 years of leadership experience in local government and community engagement. He is a Founder and former board member of Clear Vision Eau Claire, a 2015 Finalist for the Harvard University Ash Center Innovations in Public Engagement in Government Award. He was a Leading Practices Service Provider with the ICMA Center for Management Strategies, and Senior Lecturer in Community Leadership and Engagement at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. He is a faculty member of the Public Work Academy, Augsburg University; a member of the National Civic League Council of Advisors; and a Policy Fellow at the Wisconsin Institute for Public Policy and Service. He holds Master's Degrees in Public Administration and Urban Planning from the University of Kansas.; Read More

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: About - Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM

Headings: About

Paragraphs: Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM; Mike Huggins, ICMA-CM, is a former Eau Claire City Manager and Planning Director with 40 years of leadership experience in local government and community engagement. He is a Founder and former board member of Clear Vision Eau Claire, a 2015 Finalist for the Harvard University Ash Center Innovations in Public Engagement in Government Award. He was a Leading Practices Service Provider with the ICMA Center for Management Strategies, and Senior Lecturer in Community Leadership and Engagement at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. He is a faculty member of the Public Work Academy, Augsburg University; a member of the National Civic League Council of Advisors; and a Policy Fellow at the Wisconsin Institute for Public Policy and Service. He holds Master's Degrees in Public Administration and Urban Planning from the University of Kansas.; Mike's areas of interest include community engagement, public problem solving, civic organizing, and local democratic practices. His primary focus is working with local communities to build the public problem-solving skills of everyday people to collaborate and do meaningful public work.; Recent select articles about Mike's community engagement work include "Clear Vision Eau Claire: Civic Organizing and Local Democratic Practice" and "Tackling Wicked Problems Takes Resident Engagement."

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided information, it can be inferred that this organization is likely a non-profit or advocacy group focused on promoting civic engagement, public discourse, and strengthening local communities. The organization's website contains articles and blog posts that discuss topics such as the importance of public life, collective bargaining, local democracy, and civil discourse. Additionally, the organization appears to be active on social media, with a Twitter account that shares similar content. While the specific mission and goals of the organization cannot be determined from the provided information, it is evident that they are dedicated to fostering a sense of community and encouraging active participation in public life."""