Paragraphs: ABOUT US; OUR WORK; OUR BLOG; OUR WORK; September 30, 2023; 5:30 - 10:30 pm; Neptunian Woman's Club; 920 Highland Ave; Manhattan Beach, CA; iACT's annual fundraising event, impACT, will shine a light on the powerful effect creating a space for joy and play can have on children and families experiencing displacement. With over 108 million people forcibly displaced globally, play and joy are often overlooked within the humanitarian response. What iACT has learned from the communities we work with is that even in the darkest of times, we must always embrace joy. In the next 10 years, iACT will focus on amplifying the voices of the communities that we work along-side and deepening our impact. Your contribution gives you the chance to support transformative refugee and community-led humanitarian action.; " impACT has increasingly become a sold-out event, and we are expecting to reach venue capacity again this year! This event offers approximately 180-200 guests from the South Bay and the Los Angeles community an open bar, dinner, time with friends, and live entertainment throughout the evening. The event also has a unique silent auction and raffle where you can win incredible experiences, jewelry, art, designer apparel, travel, entertainment, and much more!; INSPIRING HUMANITARIAN INNOVATION; A globally recognized leader in award-winning, refugee-led sports, education, and leadership programs worldwide.; children participate in Little Ripples each year; members of the refugee and conflict-affected communities are employed by iACT; boys and girls play soccer in a Refugees United Soccer Academy each year; iACT has been building relationships with refugee communities since 2005; Based in Hermosa Beach, CA, iACT works alongside refugees and people affected by conflict in using their agency and voice to co-create, facilitate, and expand programs that meet the immediate and long-term needs of their community. Our vision is a world where the dignity, humanity, and rights of conflict-affected people are recognized, affirmed, and supported. iACT facilitates refugee and community-led education, sports, and leadership programs around the world.; iACT: Who We Are; iACT is on a mission to inspire a more mindful humanitarian world where the dignity, humanity, and agency of conflict-affected people are recognized, affirmed and supported. For over 10 years, we have co-created and evaluated our award-winning programs while piloting innovative partnership models. We are now ready to scale our programs to reach the millions around the world who are living with uncertainty and in displacement. Join us as we amplify their voices and work with them to create opportunities to build a more peaceful future for themselves and their communities.; OUR GENEROUS 2023 SPONSORS; (C) 2023 iACT, a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization.

Paragraphs: ABOUT US; OUR WORK; OUR BLOG; OUR WORK; Our mission is to resource and partner with people affected by war and conflict, to amplify their voices and create opportunities for them to thrive.; iACT works with people affected by conflict in using their agency and voice to co-create, facilitate, and expand programs that meet the immediate and long-term needs of their community.; iACT shifts power and ownership to those most impacted by conflict.; and this approach is reflected in our staffing. Our US-based team is lean.; We focus on hiring within the communities where we work.; iACT as it exists today began 15 years ago on the beaches of Los Angeles, California with a dream.; That's when Gabriel Stauring brought together a committed group of volunteers and friends, including Katie-Jay Scott, and they began to imagine what an NGO could look like built on the premise that refugees themselves are the experts.; â€œ; Gabriel's determination to act had been ignited after returning from his first visit to a Darfuri refugee camp in Chad in 2005. In listening to the refugee communities there, it became clear that just sharing their stories wouldn't be enough. They were asking for action, for programs, and for resources.; â€œ; Prior to those beach brainstorming gatherings, you were very likely to find Gabriel and Katie-Jay at a protest. At the peak of the Save Darfur movement, they could be found on the steps of the White House, at the United Nations, in the streets, calling for justice for the people of Darfur and the arrest of Sudan's then President Omar al-Bashir. Later, they toured the US, visiting schools and college campuses, talking to people about past mass atrocities and urging them to take action for current ones.; â€œ; As Gabriel and Katie-Jay made more trips to the camps, they continued listening to their Darfuri refugee friends, and a vision emerged.; â€œ; iACT formalized as an NGO in 2009 and focused on filling gaps in humanitarian response and on improving the ways to create and implement programs with refugee populations. As executive director, Katie-Jay infused their work with restorative practice and a trauma-informed approach, and soon, Darfur United, Refugees United Soccer

Academy, and Little Ripples began to take shape.; &#x2013; Today, iACT is an international action organization daring to imagine a more mindful humanitarian system; one in which the dignity, humanity, and agency of conflict-affected people are recognized, affirmed, and supported. It has expanded to multiple contexts - not just working with refugees, but with conflict-affected communities in places such as Armenia and the Central African Republic - and has begun consulting with other NGOs on how they too might work alongside conflict-affected communities in the same way.; can mean one year of play for a boy or girl in the Refugees United Soccer Academy.; iACT's soccer and early childhood education programs have been recognized across the globe for their innovation and community-led approach.; Information and interviews about our programs as well as issues and policies that impact the people we serve.; Reports, articles, and white papers delving into early childhood education, sports for development, and more.; (C) 2023 iACT, a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization.
