Paragraphs: Citizen trust in an effective and responsive Congress is essential to democracy. The Congressional Management Foundation (CMF) advances this goal by working directly with Members of Congress and staff to enhance their operations and interactions with constituents. CMF works directly with citizen groups to educate them on how Congress works, giving constituents a stronger voice in policy outcomes. The results are: a Congress more accountable, transparent, and effective; and an informed citizenry with greater trust in their democratic institutions.; CMF enhances the effectiveness of congressional offices, enabling them to provide better services for their constituents and create better policy outcomes for all Americans.; CMF promotes transparency and accountability in Congress, affording citizens data and tools to become more informed about decisions that affect them, their families, and communities.; CMF educates and motivates individuals to become active and informed citizen-advocates, providing them with an understanding of Congress, the skills to influence public policy, and the value of citizen engagement.; CMF enhances the public's understanding of how the Congress really works, providing a window into our democratic institutions through its unique relationship with lawmakers and staff.; More than 1,500 staff, interns, and incoming Members from more than 360 congressional offices participate in the training programs CMF conducts annually.; Since 2014, CMF has trained more than 100,000 citizens through more than 1,160 presentations, webinars, and videos on effectively communicating with Congress.; Since 2000, CMF has conducted more than 500 strategic planning or other consulting projects with Members of Congress and their staffs.; CMF conducts professional development training for all levels of congressional staff on office operations and management. These interactive sessions provide bipartisan "safe havens" on Capitol Hill where congressional staff come together to engage in problem-solving.; CMF provides research, training, and publications to citizens and groups that interact with Congress. CMF's citizen-advocate trainings are conducted for citizens who participate in visits with Members of Congress organized by trade associations, nonprofits, and corporations.; CMF acts as the critic, defender, and explainer of Congress-demystifying congressional operations. Its work has been cited in many media outlets including the Washington Post, the New York Times, USA Today, and major television networks.; CMF conducts primary research on Congress and provides best practices guidance on office operations. CMF's most prominent research program-the Gold Mouse Awards for the best congressional websites-is responsible for significant improvements to the transparency and accountability in congressional offices.; CMF consults with individual House and Senate offices to strengthen their operations. This work entails spending weeks with a Member of Congress and staff, culminating in an intensive strategic planning session to help each office develop goals and plans to meet the needs of its constituents.; Our Work; Mission & Values; The Partnership For a More Perfect Union; Staff; Consultants and Trainers; Board of Directors; Internships; FAQ; Contact Us; Learn more about CMF's work and major achievements in our 2022 Annual Report;; Additional options: view the CMF 2022 Annual Report online or in PDF here4.59 MB.; 216 Seventh Street SE, 2nd Floor Washington, DC 20003 (202) 546-0100; The Congressional Management Foundation (CMF) is a 501(c)(3) nonpartisan nonprofit strengthening Congress and building trust in its work with and for the American people.

Paragraphs: One of the three pillars of CMF's mission is to "revitalize Congress as an institution, working inside and outside Congress to foster a deliberative, functioning, and accountable legislature." We have approached this in many different ways throughout our history, but most recently our work has centered on supporting congressional modernization, understanding the state of the Congress, transforming constituent & public engagement, encouraging office innovation, providing professional development for Members, fostering staff diversity, and improving staff worklife.; CMF has always encouraged congressional modernization, which was how we came to be one of the key organizations working to support the Select Committee on the Modernization of Congress in the 116th and 117th Congresses. The Committee relied on our research; invited us to serve as witnesses at hearings and as participants in issue-specific working groups; and adopted our recommendations to Congress. Additionally, through the "FixCongress Cohort" we collaborated with academics and other civil society organizations to help identify issues and recommendations, spread the word about the Committee's important work, and encourage implementation of the Committee's recommendations. Periodically Congress creates a mechanism to investigate and improve its operations. Though these efforts generally receive little media and public attention, they have changed and modernized the institution in substantive ways that have significantly changed the practice of democracy in the United States. The most recent effort was the Select Committee on the Modernization of Congress in the House of Representatives. The Committee served as a model for bipartisan collaboration and productivity in a polarized Congress. From 2019 through 2022, it investigated the needs and challenges of Congress and its Members and staff, developed and passed recommendations almost unanimously, and worked with organizations and stakeholders inside and outside Congress to ensure its recommendations were implemented.; ; 216 Seventh Street SE, 2nd Floor Washington, DC 20003 (202) 546-0100; The Congressional Management Foundation (CMF) is a 501(c)(3) nonpartisan nonprofit strengthening Congress and building trust in its work with and for the American people.

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided information, it can be inferred that this organization is likely a non-profit foundation dedicated to supporting and improving the United States Congress. The presence of sections on revitalizing Congress, providing resources for advocates and members of Congress, and connecting citizens with Congress suggests that the organization aims to strengthen the institution of Congress and promote effective governance. The mention of democracy awards, initiatives for staff diversity, and crisis resource centers further indicates the organization's commitment to fostering a healthy and functional Congress. Additionally, the inclusion of social media links and a Guidestar profile suggests that the organization is transparent and accountable to the public. ""
