

""Twitter handle (and profile name): Moreincommon_ (More in Common)

Twitter description: Strengthening democratic societies by countering division and polarization. Also @moreincommon_us @MoreinCommon_DE @Destin_Commune and @moreincommon_pl

Description of the organization from a third party source: Main moreincommon organization

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: We are More in Common

Headings: Life is better with cookies.; Shifting gears on levelling up; Putting the public and communities in the driving seat; The Respect Agenda; A reset for politics and institutions; Attitudes and Experiences of Republicans in America; Where are the police?; Britons' attitudes to crime, anti-social behaviour and the police; Parlons Climat; Discover our Parlons Climat project in France to help civil society engage hard to reach audiences on the green transition (in French); Navigating the Cost of Living Crisis; New research from Germany, France, UK and Poland; Britons and Gender Identity; Navigating common ground and division; The Endless Sea; Imagining a Story of Tomorrow; Destin Commune (More in Common France) looks at French attitudes to disinformation; Welcoming Ukrainians: The Hosts' Perspective; Social Connection Across Difference in the US; More than Choosing Sides; We are More in Common; Latest News; Fourth of July in America: American Identity Research Project; The New Normal?; Britons and Gender Identity; Our Initiatives; American Fabric in the news

Paragraphs: Most people would agree cookies make life better. For us, they help us improve our website. If you don't like cookies, that's okay - you can let us know by clicking the manage cookies' button. Read more.; Manage cookies; These cookies allow us to count visits and understand what people are reading on our website. The data is collected in a way that does not directly identify anyone or infringe on your privacy.; Societies are fracturing as the forces of division grow stronger, driving people apart.; We are losing trust in each other and in the future. Feelings of frustration, powerlessness and a loss of belonging are making us vulnerable to 'us versus them' stories, which turn us against each other. Social media is magnifying the loudest and most extreme voices.; A generation ago, experts claimed the forces of democracy, freedom and progress were unstoppable. Instead we are entering the 2020s with many of the most established democracies feeling weakened, unstable and under increasing threat.; Our organization's name reflects our vision: to build more united, inclusive and resilient societies in which people believe that what they have in common is stronger than what divides them.; More in Common's mission is to understand the forces driving us apart, to find common ground and help to bring people together to tackle our shared challenges.; We draw from groundbreaking research to test and find solutions, working with partners that have the capacity to make a real difference at scale. And we help build the larger field of efforts to strengthen democratic societies against the threats of polarization and division.; Drawing from our survey conducted among 2500 Americans in May-June 2022, this report explores key narratives that Americans identify both in their own family history and in the shared American history. Although the Fourth of July evokes stories of national history, we find that personal stories of family history are a more powerful way to break through 'us versus them' narratives.; Our 7-country report drawing from a survey of 14,000 people on the impacts of COVID-19 on trust, social cohesion, democracy and expectations for an uncertain future in France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Poland, the United Kingdom and the United States.; An in-depth analysis of the British public's attitudes to gender identity and trans equality. Based on polling of more than 5,000 people and 20 focus groups, the report finds that the divisive debate playing out in Westminster and social media is out of sync with the public's approach to the issue.; Collaborations that make a difference. From understanding what can bring America back together to the creation of an annual community street party.; Read just some of the coverage of our latest reports from around the world.; About Us; Who We Are; Contact; (C) 2022 More in Common. All rights reserved.

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: Our DNA

Headings: Life is better with cookies.; Our DNA; Our Approach; We are More in Common

Paragraphs: Most people would agree cookies make life better. For us, they help us improve our website. If you don't like cookies, that's okay - you can let us know by clicking the manage cookies' button. Read more.; Manage cookies; These cookies allow us to count visits and understand what people are reading on our website. The data is collected in a way that does not directly identify anyone or infringe on your privacy.; More in Common's mission is to understand the forces driving us apart, find common ground and bring people together to tackle shared challenges. We have national teams in the United States, the United Kingdom, Poland, Germany and France. While our specific strategies differ according to where we see the greatest opportunity for positive impact, our teams share the vision of building more united and inclusive democratic societies, in which people believe and feel that what they have in common is stronger than what divides them.; While there are similar forces threatening democratic societies, we have established separate national teams with their own national strategies, because we believe strategies to strengthen resilience against the forces of division must build on each society's unique national and regional characteristics.; In our work, we aim for originality, strategic rigor and a sound evidence base. We put learning at the center of our work. We don't have all the answers, but we are committed to deepening our insights, improving our approaches and measuring our impact. As a learning organization, we put a high value on collaboration and are committed to sharing our own insights generously with those who share our goals.; Learn how we work and how we put our collective experience into action.; Learn more about what we each bring to More in Common.; About Us; Who We Are; Contact; (C) 2022 More in Common. All rights reserved.

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided information, it appears that this organization is dedicated to fostering understanding and common ground among diverse populations. The presence of sections labeled "Our DNA," "Team," "Governance," and "Funding" suggests that the organization is transparent about its structure and operations. The inclusion of pages on "Our Work," "Research," "Publications," and "Initiatives" indicates that the organization conducts research, publishes findings, and undertakes various projects to promote its mission. The inclusion of contact information and job opportunities suggests that the organization is actively engaged with the public and is seeking to expand its team. The organization's presence across multiple countries, as evidenced by the localized versions of its website, indicates a global reach and a commitment to addressing issues that transcend national boundaries. Overall, the information provided suggests that this organization is dedicated to promoting understanding, dialogue, and common ground among diverse populations through research, publications, and initiatives."""