

""Twitter handle (and profile name): MoneyInPolitics (FollowTheMoney.org)

Twitter description: Nonpartisan nonprofit organization managing a national campaign finance database of state and federal contribution data. Links/RTs & endorsements.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "The National Institute on Money in Politics promotes an accountable democracy by compiling comprehensive campaign-donor, lobbyist, and other information from government disclosure agencies and making it freely available at FollowTheMoney.org "

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: Home - FollowTheMoney.org

Headings: Merger Announcement; Preeminent money in politics watchdogs unite to form OpenSecrets; ; Tools; The Data; Reports & News; Connect; Help; About Us

Paragraphs:

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: Mission & History - FollowTheMoney.org

Headings: Mission & History; Mission; What we do; A brief history of the Institute; 2015 MacArthur Award for Creative and Effective Institutions; RAND Corporation Review of the Institute; Reports & Statements; Look at this!; Connect; Help; About Us

Paragraphs: The nonpartisan, nonprofit National Institute on Money in Politics (NIMP) promotes an accountable democracy by compiling comprehensive campaign-donor, lobbyist, and other information from government disclosure agencies nationwide and making it freely available at FollowTheMoney.org.; The Institute researches and archives a 50-state federal/state database of contributions documenting $100+ billion, plus more than 2 million state lobbyist-client relationships that are registered annually. Recent expansions include selected local-level data, collecting independent spending reports for federal campaigns and in 31 states, and lobbying spending in 20 states.; "The liberty of a democracy is not safe if the people tolerated the growth of private power to a point where it becomes stronger than the democratic state itself." - Franklin D. Roosevelt; In 1999, three regional groups joined forces to reveal the influence of special-interest contributors on state elections. "The National Institute on Money in Politics is a national nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to accurate, comprehensive and unbiased documentation and research on campaign finance at the state level."; Located in Helena, Montana, the Institute collects reports submitted to agencies in every state by all candidates for statewide office, the legislature, and state supreme court; major political party committees; ballot measure committees; independent spending; and lobbying expenditures. In addition, you'll find data on federal campaigns since 2010. See the full range here.; The task was and is immense. The Institute researched the reporting requirements in all 50 states-each with its own deadlines and laws-and created a uniform, seamless database that reveals the economic interests behind the contributions. The complexity and sheer volume of the work required skilled reasoning and dogged perseverance.; The Institute's massive database is intended to inform public debate on state policy issues. Our perceptive researchers help people make sense of the numbers. "The Institute publishes studies and provides technical assistance and training to reporters, academic researchers and public interest groups that work on state policy issues." The result today is substantive profiles on candidates and issues, insightful reports and reliable data for all 50 states.; Separately, the Campaign Finance Institute (CFI) also opened its doors in 1999. Since then, it has earned a reputation as the nation's preeminent think tank on money in politics. In 2018, CFI officially joined the Institute. Each organization has performed valuable work separately by using the differences among states to help understand the effects of federal, state, and local campaign laws.; The National Institute on Money in State Politics dropped the word "State" to better reflect the expanded federal and state work. The National Institute on Money in Politics now has the resources and skills not only to continue, but to look at more jurisdictions and more programs more deeply. It will bring new data and new research to produce new insights. The results will continue to inform scholars and journalists. It will also guide agencies, lawmakers, activists, and others to develop more effective policies.; We believe that knowledgeable voters are the strongest foundation of democracy. Our data is freely presented to the nation.; ; Learn why the Institute was selected for the 2015 MacArthur Award for Creative and Effective Institutions. 4 min. 14 sec.; August 12, 2014: A new RAND Corporation report evaluates the impact of the National Institute on Money in State Politics; "We find that the Institute has made meaningful contributions to the public debate over the role of money in politics, both at the state level and nationally. The users we interviewed see the Institute as the gold standard resource for data on money in state politics. Indeed, the Institute has been a driving force behind informed public discussion of state campaign finance in the academic, journalistic, and advocacy communities. Perhaps as importantly, its users see it as the best available independent resource for individuals who seek to discover the roots of the campaign money that has financed their own state-level candidates."; Download the report here.; View Annual Reports & Convenings; 990s and Financial Statements

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based on the provided information, it can be inferred that this organization is focused on tracking and analyzing money in politics, with a particular emphasis on lobbying, campaign finance, and election spending. The organization provides various tools and resources for exploring and understanding the influence of money in political processes. It also conducts research and publishes reports on topics related to campaign finance and lobbying. Additionally, the organization offers educational resources and opportunities for civic engagement, including civics lessons, state disclosure agency information, and visually-speaking resources. The organization's mission appears to be to promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making in the political arena."""