Twitter description: In every #emerging #issue lies an opportunity. The Institute for Emerging Issues at @NCState is here to find #NorthCarolina's opportunities. You can help.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "IEI was founded in 2002 to to identify new ways to educate and engage our citizens and to help them solve problems and recognize the importance and necessity of their participation. IEI's Emerging Issues Commons, a physical space in Hunt Library on NC State University's Centennial Campus and dynamic online companion site, are designed to bring North Carolinians together around our state's most pressing issues in the areas of education, health, economy, and environments. Patrick Cronin works with IEI's Director and talented staff to identify, define and develop the work of the Institute in ways that fuel collaboration and build ownership for action among IEI's stakeholders. IEI's work, including convenings, tailored research and publications, engages key constituencies from the government, business, education and non-profit sectors in North Carolina and beyond."
