

""Twitter handle (and profile name): SquishTalks (Stuart Chittenden)

Twitter description: The whimsical belief in conversation for inspiration, enlightenment and entertainment: Conversation matters.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "I believe that conversation helps us to live better and well, as individuals, families, and communities. Driven by that belief, I founded Squishtalks to design and deliver conversation programs for corporate and non-profit organizations, for public and community purposes. "

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: About | Squishtalks

Headings: A little about me...; Hello, I'm Stuart Chittenden; Subscribe to my eNewsletter; Thank you for subscribing.; Subscribe; You've subscribed, thanks!

Paragraphs: I am a British expatriate that has called Omaha, Nebraska home for over a decade now. I believe that conversation helps us to live better and well, as individuals, families, and communities.; Driven by that belief, I founded Squishtalks to design and deliver conversation programs for corporate and non-profit organizations, for public and community purposes. Corporate clients have included a variety of small to Fortune 500 companies. Non-profit and community partners have included foundations, civic organizations and those working towards social harmony.; I was formerly a partner at the Omaha-based branding consultancy, david day associates, where I consulted on brand strategy with local and national clients, helping them understand why they exist, what their purpose is, and how they should engage their stakeholders.; In the Omaha community, I have been a Big Brother through Big Brothers Big Sisters and served on the Omaha Public Library Board of Trustees. I currently serve on the board for the social justice nonprofit, Nebraska Appleseed.; My latest large-scale community project was a couple of 830 mile long conversations, implemented with the sponsorship and support of the non-profit Omaha Creative Institute and a substantial grant awarded by Humanities Nebraska. a couple of 830 mile long conversations was an endeavor honoring a long line of oral traditions. In an RV, I adventured for four weeks along the side roads and among the small towns of the state to talk with Nebraskans. Traveling through conversations, discovering the lives, cultures and stories of people I met, the project was a long hello to Nebraska.; As an amateur poet, my work has been published in The Antigonish Review, the Blue Moon Literary & Art Review, Euphony Journal and the Tulane Review. My two books are in process...; Manager of Leadership Development, Greater Omaha Chamber; Indulge in some fresh thinking.; ; ; Embrace your curiosity. Subscribe to my eNewsletter for fresh thinking, thoughtful opinions and a hint of the provocative.; ; ; Unsubscribe at any time. I do not send spam.

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the provided links, it can be inferred that "Squish Talks" is an organization that offers a range of services related to public speaking, community engagement, and conference design. They provide speaking engagements, consulting and facilitation services, community dialogue facilitation, conference design, and live events. The organization also has a blog and social media presence, suggesting that they actively engage with their audience and share insights on relevant topics. While the specific nature of their work and their target audience cannot be determined from the provided links, it is evident that they aim to facilitate meaningful conversations and foster community engagement through various platforms and formats."""