

""Twitter handle (and profile name): ADialogueP (AmericanDialogueProj)

Twitter description: The American Dialogue Project - Offering structured, facilitated 40-min phone calls between strangers with different views. It's good to connect.

Description of the organization from a third party source: "The American Dialogue Project exists to help people be in conversation with one another in an accessible, productive way. It is a platform for building our capacity for dialogue. ADP Calls are the building blocks of the American Dialogue Project. Each call is a simple, structured 40-minute phone conversation between two strangers with the assistance of a professional facilitator."

Scraped text from their home page of their website: Titles: American Dialogue Project - Connecting Americans, one phone call at a time.

Headings: American Dialogue Project; Facilitators; Call & Connect; Resources; That's a great idea! (And I'd never do it.); Small Town Advantage; Why Talk Politics; Neighbors; Navigation; Recent Posts; Related Efforts; Social; ; ;

Paragraphs: Connecting Americans, one phone call at a time.; We know. It can be weird to talk on the phone, especially with a stranger. Many of you have asked us, What happens on these calls? I don't think I'd know what to say. It's a great idea...but I could never do it. ...Well, listen here to real ADP Calls before you say for sure.; What growing up in a town of 600 taught me about engaging with the world.; I'm not sure exactly when I stopped talking politics with my parents, but it was probably around the time healthcare policy was up for debate in 2009.; It's striking to me that I can do this with a stranger, who lives 300 miles away, but not with my next-door neighbor.; View many other dialogue-related initiatives here.

Scraped text from their about page of their website: Titles: About - American Dialogue Project

Headings: About; Sign up for an ADP Call; Navigation; Recent Posts; Related Efforts; Social

Paragraphs: American Dialogue Project; The American Dialogue Project exists to help people be in conversation with one another in an accessible, productive way. It is a platform for building our capacity for dialogue.; At the heart of the American Dialogue Project is the ADP Call, a very basic idea. It's just a short phone conversation, no more than 40 minutes, between two strangers who are each compelled or curious enough to want to connect and swap stories.; The call is convened by a trained facilitator, who is on hand throughout to help keep the conversation on time and on track. Two different people from different walks of life take turns talking and listening. And that's it. When the call is over, it's done.; The core experience of dialogue is that of listening and being heard. ADP is here to remind us how satisfying and powerful that feeling of connection can be.; In addition to the Calls, ADP aggregates resources that anyone can use to learn more about dialogue and improve their ability to engage in it well. ADP will also provide a roster of professional facilitators who are available to work in local communities to foster and support dialogue in the near future.; Check out the Frequently Asked Questions for more info.; "How can we talk it through? When we talk together, we have a choice between destructive diatribe and constructive dialogue. We can choose life and connection or separation and disintegration. We have the opportunity to choose life, but to do so, conversation is essential. Listening to each other and truly talking together-these are deep, sociospiritual actions. People think talking is not action. That's a mistake. Conversation is a profound action that helps us to expand our consciousness and connect together parts and people that are separated. I can't think of anything else that does that. It is one of our unique human paths to fulfillment and wholeness." - Anne W. Doshier; View many other dialogue-related initiatives here.

Scraped text from their mission page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Scraped text from their history page of their website: Titles: NA

Headings: NA

Paragraphs: NA

Summaries of Links: Based solely on the information provided, it can be inferred that this organization is called the American Dialogue Project. It appears to be focused on facilitating dialogue and understanding between people with different political views. The organization has a website with information about its mission, goals, and activities. It also provides resources and tools for people to engage in productive conversations about politics. Additionally, the organization offers training for facilitators who lead these dialogues. The website includes blog posts, articles, and other resources related to political dialogue and understanding. Overall, the information suggests that this organization is dedicated to promoting constructive dialogue and bridging divides between people with different political perspectives."""