Paragraphs: READ MORE ->; Trump carried every county in Iowa except one. What accounts for the Trump juggernaut? Our take is that all his rivals, Biden included, promise to be better leaders of the established order. Trump embodies rejection, even disdain, for the establishment. For years now, Americans have seen that nothing much works as it should. New York Times columnist Bret Stephens explains that Trump is riding "a wave of pessimism." Referring to Alana Newhouse's writing, Stephens notes that "brokenness has become the defining feature of much of American life."; In his latest, "Everyday Freedom," Howard cites the buildup since the 1960s of laws and rules that were intended to ensure procedural fairness, but in practice have chipped away at officials' authority to do their jobs.; Modern law, he says, has created "an elaborate precautionary system aimed at precluding human error." Public officials have learned it's safer to hide behind highly prescriptive laws and regulations than to risk using their judgment, moral intuition and common sense to solve public problems.; System failure is going on all around us-the 911 operator who puts you on hold; the outsourced federal "processing centers" that are months behind on essential tasks; the public-school officials who do nothing when told a six-year-old has a loaded handgun in his backpack; the mandatory D.E.I. training that says you can't say "pregnant women" anymore-now you have to say "pregnant people." We've all seen versions of it. We get steamed up about it. We go online and commiserate about it. But most of us don't think about it in analytical terms. That's what Howard does.; Common Good Chair Philip K. Howard's new book, Everyday Freedom: Designing the Framework for a Flourishing Society, will be published by Rodin Books on January 23. The book pinpoints the source of powerlessness that is fraying American culture and causing public failure, and offers a bold vision of simpler governing frameworks to re-empower Americans in their daily choices. "Everyday Freedom shows us how to break out of the spiral of decreasing trust, confidence, and capability," social psychologist Jonathan Haidt concludes, "and reinvigorate our institutions, our governments, and ourselves."; CONTACT US; 222 East 46th Street, Suite 401 New York, NY 10017 (212) 681-8199 commongood@commongood.org; EIN: 13-3859811; MAILING ADDRESS; P.O. Box 8536_x000D_
